

Biography – Len Taylor

Having operated in many market sectors (power, petrochemical, renewables, pharma and oil and gas, this facilitated the benefit of Operations/Technology Transfer within all sectors increasing business performance for international companies operating in both the UK and overseas. Additionally, he has worked within owner operator companies (both in Operations and Manufacturing) and EPC organisations (with multinational offices for project delivery and design).

Roles in these sectors have been at senior management levels including C-Level, focusing upon business strategic direction/implementation, and new market and product development, as a result considerable experience has been built up.

Engaged as Northern Powerhouse Sector Specialist Offshore Wind and Renewables for the Dept for international Trade.

As a Fellow of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, and ex Regional Board member of the EEF (now called Make UK), and ex Regional Chair of the ECITB. Len is a highly qualified and experienced person, and his knowledge and experience is focused through Consultancy activities to SME's and larger organisations.

This business experience can be utilised in any business environment, be it through directly supporting the management team through coaching and mentoring, through to facilitating an organisation to develop strategies and address key business challenges. This is through expertise in business transformation, operational improvement and strategy, delivered from a perspective of experience, common sense and pragmatism.